

AS: You guys have been known to have an excellent relationship with your fans, something that has been helped by access to social media. Why is that kind of interactive relationship with your fans so integral to the band?

Dattoli: I think especially in the year we're in, in the society we're in, it's so present and important. At the same time though, it's a little sad because when you're spending some time with your friends, before the end of the night there is at least some point during which everyone is on their phone checking Instagram or something like that, you know? But anyways, for us it's important to share experiences face to face with fans in different countries or cities, but you can still share those experiences online as well. Through access to our social media, fans can see us in the studio or watch our vlogs, as opposed to words written on a page. It's a great way for people to see what we're doing.
